

GRASSROOTS MARKETING INTERNSHIP

General Mission of the Program

The program is designed to market and sell the Missouri vs. Illinois Arch Rivalry Football Game through Grassroots Marketing while also offering interns the chance to learn more about the St. Louis Sports Commission and its missions and goals.

Program Description

The program provides college students with a hands-on event marketing experience. The components of the program include grassroots marketing campaigns and basic principles of marketing and public relations.

Program Structure

Grassroots Marketing Interns will report each week to a “class session” of approximately one and a half hours. During this session, skills and objectives will be taught and assignments will be divvied out to students. Grassroots Marketing Interns are also responsible for developing and implementing grassroots marketing plan and appearances.

Who do we look for?

The department looks for students who are motivated and creative. The ideal candidate is a person who is involved in a variety of campus activities and enjoys talking to people.

How are Grassroots Marketing Interns utilized?

The St. Louis Sports Commission empowers students to become ambassadors for the Missouri vs. Illinois Arch Rivalry Football Game in the St. Louis Market and beyond.
